IMPERIAL GUARD SENTINEL
£9.00 complete

Deep in the deserts of Thoth the embittered survivors of a landing craft malfunction fight a vicious war of hit and run against a daemonic enemy. At their head, the feared and loved Captain Al'rahem - stalking his enemy then suddenly thrusting into their rear, or hitting their flanks and always escaping before the condemned enemy can strike back.
But this time it's all gone wrong. Now they find themselves with their backs to the wall, desperately protecting themselves from the vicious attacks of the 'Witches' of Thoth, the Chaos worshipping rebels. Al'rahem himself leads his Desert Tigers in a fierce rearguard action - if he fails, his enemy will break through and fall hungrily upon his column. If he can hold them off long enough, his main forces will escape intact!

HOW TO USE YOUR CASUALTIES!

EXCLUSIVE TO TROLL!

You can use these dead and wounded figures to create a more authentic battlefield in your games but why not use them as an extra mission objective? For example, in the cleansing of Thoth, Captain Al - Raham's Tallarns are fighting against a foul Chaos uprising. Not the sort of people to treat wounded enemies with care! So, you could say that each time a Guardsman would normally be removed as a casualty, roll a D6. On a 4+, replace him with a casualty figure. (The casualty may not move or fire and may not be targeted by the enemy.) Casualties can be carried to safety by any friendly figure who gets into contact with them. Figures become encumbered and may only move at half rate when carrying a casualty. At the end of the battle, your opponent gains +1 Victory point if any casualties are left on the field (for the morale bonus to be gained from torturing the hated enemy!). Try your own special rules and let us know how they work!
